Description

Improving the attention to victims of intimate partner violence is a shared concern among Europe. The European Project LEXOP: Lex-Operators all together for women victims of intimate partner violence, aims to build a multidisciplinary network of operators involved in fighting intimate partner violence in order to provide a coordinated response, in which institutions can fight the intimate partner violence, protecting the victims and persecuting offenders.

The LEXOP project is lead by the University of Bologna. It has got partners from Greece, Germany and Spain and includes the participation of France. The Ministry of Home Affairs of the Government of Catalonia participates as a partner through its General Direction of Security Administration, and it counts with the associated participation of the Tamaia Association and the Hospital Clinic of Barcelona. It also counts with the Public Security Institute of Catalonia, the Catalan Women's Institute and the Catalan Ministry of Justice. The project lasts two years and it started on March 2011.

The LEXOP training aims to improve professional capability of lex-operators who will be in contact with women victims of intimate partner violence as they need to have a wide knowledge of the subject matter to intervene in this complex problem that includes many elements: historical, psychological, affective, cultural, legal proceedings complexity, violence consequences, traditional roles, etc.

The project has also envisaged a vademecum which will include ideas and definitions resulted from the training.

Target audience for the sessions: Judges, magistrates, prosecutors, forensics, judicial office staff members. The seminar and workshops are addressed to both public and private lex-operators.

- Sessions: 30 public lex-operators
- Seminar: Public and private lex-operators and other professionals involved in the assistance network
